From an early age, Ron knew he wanted to help people. In high school, he decided he wanted to be a counselor. He studied psychology in his efforts to be of service, but found that this wasn't the way he could be of most help to others. "I have always been psychic, and I had pursued it as kind of a hobby. However, several years ago the spirits started to push me into taking it more seriously. So I started taking classes. Now I find that I really like serving people with my psychic gifts. I feel that now I am better able to serve as a counselor by combining my psychic gifts with what I have learned from psychology."

Ron investigated many ways of using his psychic gifts, taking classes from a variety of teachers. "The last few years I have been studying in Ferndale under Terry Ryan," a Spiritualist minister from the renowned Camp Chesterfield. As part of this Spiritualist training, Ron began using his gifts as a medium to give messages to members of the group. From there, he has expanded to offering his gifts to a wider clientele.

Primarily, Ron works as a medium, "bringing in messages from not only deceased loved ones but also the larger spirit world, including angels, ascended masters, guides, and more, depending what spirits want to communicate with the client and vice versa. However, I often look into the client's present and future life, usually at his or her request." Ron describes doing this work as "an adventure," for both his clients and himself. He never knows ahead of time what the spirit world will wish to communicate, or who will come across.

An important part of Ron's work is that he wants his clients to always remember, no matter what the message they receive from Spirit conveys, they are in charge of their own lives. "I strive to give my clients messages from the spirit world with as minimal interpretation on my part as necessary to get the message across to the client. I can never have as much understanding about a situation as the client does, so I feel it is best that the client uses the information from Spirit to make his or her own decisions." Free will is always an important part of the story: "Spirits may have a broader view than we do, and may see better where the path you are on is leading. However, free will means that the future is not written in stone. The message may be intended to give you an opportunity to avoid potential problems or embrace desired opportunities.”

Ron has enjoyed the environment and people he has met through Michigan Psychic Fair, and looks forward to offering his gifts to many more through these events.
